

Asian Public Governance Forum on Regulatory Reform

Improving Productivity through Regulatory Coherence and Good Practice

29-30 March 2016

Hilton Kuching Hotel,
Sarawak, Malaysia

WELCOME NOTE

On behalf of all co-hosting parties, I would like to wholeheartedly welcome you to the Asian Public Governance (APG) Forum on Regulatory Reform, co-organized by Malaysia Productivity Corporation, Korea Legislation Research Institute, and Korea Institute of Public Administration. I feel privileged to host this year's event with the honor of collaborating with Sarawak State Government in this beautiful city of Kuching.

Since its establishment in 2005, the Public Governance Programme has been striving to disseminate policy experiences of OECD countries including Korea on various themes of public governance to the Asia-Pacific region. Pursuing this mission, the Programme has hosted numerous international meetings and seminars as well as capacity building programs for more than 1600 public officials and experts from over 30 countries. Our work and contribution to improving public governance for the past 10 years have been well received, and the Programme will continue to strive to act as a regional hub in enhancing public governance and creating opportunities to strengthen cross-border networks.

Recognizing that good regulation is essential to help governments effectively and efficiently advance societies and economies, this year's APG Forum on Regulatory Reform aims to provide a platform for in-depth policy discussions for participants to help deepen their understanding of regulatory reform and develop the capacity in the use of good regulatory practices as means to stimulate economic productivity and growth. Taking advantage of presentations and floor discussions, the meeting is expected to highlight recent relevant practices and experiences from economies with high regulatory performance and coherence across the government for those seeking to enhance quality of regulation and implement better regulatory governance.

I'd like to express my sincere gratitude for taking part of the forum. I sincerely hope that you'd feel comfortable to contribute your thoughts and exchange new ideas and initiatives. I encourage you to actively participate in all the dialogues and discussions and take numerous benefits back with you. May you find the occasion informative, thought-provoking and act as a catalyst in spurring dialogues for strong collaborations in the future.

Park, Deok Soo
Director General
Public Governance Programme
OECD Korea Policy Centre

SPONSORSHIP

The Public Governance Programme (PGP) of OECD Korea Policy Centre, in collaboration with the Malaysia Productivity Corporation, Korea Institute of Public Administration and Korea Legislation Research Institute, is organizing the Asian Public Governance (APG) Forum on Regulatory Reform: Improving Productivity through Regulatory Coherence and Good Practice, which will be held in Sarawak, Malaysia on 29-30 March 2016.

OBJECTIVES

The meeting brings together practitioners, policy makers and researchers with expertise in the field of regulatory policy and enable in-depth discussions in a closer setting; serving as a platform for opportunity to strengthen cross-border networks among the experts and public officials.

The objective of the event is to provide an open and participatory platform for the Asia-Pacific countries to stimulate discussions on how to enhance the quality of regulations for competitiveness and better economic and social outcomes. More specifically, participants will be able to (a) exchange experiences and discuss public governance issues in regulatory reform in their countries for mutual learning among policy makers, (b) deepen understanding of current status and trends of regulatory policies, and (c) develop and strengthen areas for collaboration.

BACKGROUND

Globalization has brought about more intense competition. Countries around the world face similar problems that call for better regulatory tools, institutions and policies that help to create the conditions for entrepreneurship, sustainable employment, higher productivity and good governance.

Recognizing such need, the PGP has launched APG Forum on Regulatory Reform to be held on a regular basis for in-depth policy discussions to deepen understanding of regulatory reform as a vector for stimulating economic productivity and growth.

The annual meeting series bring together experts and delegates for in-depth discussions. The APG Forum on Regulatory Reform: Improving Regulatory Policy for Balanced Economic Growth held in Korea last year was well received as it has stimulated the discussion of regulatory reform in the issues of governance by looking at the background and significance of regulatory policy, regulatory reform for balanced growth and economic stimulation, stakeholder engagement and the socio-economic impact of regulations.

This year's forum aims to carry on the aforementioned objectives by providing a valuable opportunity to highlight recent relevant researches on regulatory reform as well as shared experiences from economies with high regulatory performance to those that are seeking to implement better regulatory governance where capacity is currently low.

EXPECTED RESULTS

Taking advantage of the presentations and floor discussions, the meeting is expected to achieve the following outputs:

- Increased understanding of current status and trend of regulatory reform in member and non-member countries, particularly in Asia and the Pacific, and its development direction
- Enhanced knowledge on regulatory reform challenges and opportunities, issues and practices, explored experiences and lessons learned in promoting the implementation of regulatory policy for productivity growth at sub-national level
- Suggestions and recommendations to PGP in the area of regulatory reform to take into consideration for future activities

PARTICIPANTS

The APG Forum will bring together practitioners, policy makers and researchers with expertise in the field of regulatory policy from member and non-member countries at the top decision-making level or those who hold equivalent within national governments. Distinguished experts from a various organizations and associations concerning regulatory policy will also take part in this event for in-depth discussions in a closer setting and strengthened cross-border network.

MEETING STRUCTURE

The APG Forum will be held for two days and will be articulated into 2 plenary and 6 breakout sessions. Each session includes presentations by invited speakers and discussion. After the presentations by invited speakers, the participants are invited to contribute to the discussion drawn from their own country experiences and expertise.
